Meet Paulette

Ready to take your audience on an inspirational journey and provide them with tangible takeaways to act in life, at work or in the classroom? Look no further! Paulette has you covered with tailored dynamic engaging and interactive presentations that will wow your audiences. She has worked in Higher Education helping students succeed outside the classroom 12 years and counting. As a Student Affairs leader, she knows what it takes to lead effective teams and take students on a journey to success through retention strategies that work. College and university audiences are impressed with her candor, knowledge, and action steps that students can use to get to the next level. She uses that same energy as a Senior Program Consultant to educate non-profit leaders about how to make positive change and the action steps to get there.

Author of several published books, Paulette is constantly writing the chapters of her life story and sharing the process and journey to inspire others ready to take action in their own lives. She writes children's books with her daughter through their company Harper and Hunter LLC to contribute meaningful, diverse and needed books for children, Paulette has a wide range of audiences who love and adore her writing and the impact she makes through all her endeavors and community engagement. Outside of being an educator, author, do-it-yourself PR maven, and volunteer, Paulette has been dubbed a "super-connector" making meaning connections with community members, celebrities, academic institutions and organizations teaching others how to do the same. From invitations to the Drew Barrymore Show, podcasts, radio interviews and many news segments, Paulette can show you how to create meaningful connections through effective communication and storytelling.

To put it simply, we all want to win; we just need someone to help guide us to our next victory. That's is what you get when you hire Paulette. Her many stories of resilience to success will inspire, motivate and encourage any audience to take action and be the best version of themselves.
